

In the reading chart below, 312 days are included for reading. This assumes the absence of designated reading on the Lord’s Days since most readers will focus on the text of their sermons. The assumption is that there may also be specific texts on Good Friday and Christmas (Easter is always on the Lord’s Day). Thus, for years marked “313,” a specific text may be substituted on the reader’s choice of either Good Friday or Christmas, while years marked “314” allow for specific readings on both days. On the occasional years marked “312,” the plan will need to be followed even on Good Friday and Christmas. Sample texts are provided at the end of the chart for Old and New Testament readings for Good Friday and Christmas. For example, in 2021, because it has 313 days, the reader could decide to read a special text for Good Friday, while they would be reading the next text in the reading plan on Christmas (or vice versa). In 2033, Christmas lands on Sunday, so Good Friday must include special readings as well.

A blank box is provided under the “Day” Column to fill in the date for the respective year. Since dates move a little, the ends and beginnings of months will not always line up correctly.

This plan will take readers through the Old Testament once a year and the New Testament twice (Revelation is only read the second time). Reading breaks for the New Testament roughly follow the Book of Common Prayer. Old Testament readings are designed to take the reader straight through the English order of the Old Testament, but, like the Hebrew Bible, the Chronicles are placed at the end.

The Psalms reading chart provided at the end—adopted from the Book of Common Prayer—does not include readings for the 31st day of the month. Since there are no Sunday readings in this plan, you may choose from one of the Sundays that was skipped for the month. Using this plan will take the reader through the Psalms every month. Alternatively, the morning and evening Psalms could be alternated between months so that the Psalms are completed once every two months.

Asterisks (*) denote a reading somewhat longer than typical.
